POLK ON INGALLS.

says that his first great effort will be the defeat of John J. Ingalls for the United States senate from Kausas. Oh yes, North Carolina and South Carolina and Georgia and Missouri all rendered themselves very conspicuous in 1856 in attempting to force their ideas upon this same Kansas, out of which Polk would now force John James Ingalls. But they run on to the spirit of old Ossawattamie Brown, he whose soul goes wandering on, and on to a thousand young John James Ingallses from the hills of New England and from the valleys of Ohio. Before they get through with the not only the Polks and the states named, but the entire south got, lifted from an atmosphere begotten of barbarism and barbarism a were set forward, hundreds of years in civilization: but it had to be done by force, and against the wills of the Polks and against the wills of the fellows whose votes he now claims to in his pocket, CHEEV.

done at the cost of many of their lives and at the cost of the money value of the ried around, also, in their pockets, to trade and traffic in. Although the Polks were whipped they won't forget it, and they are wont to take advantage of every circumstance to punish all Ingallses who ever remind them of their defeat in making Kansas a slave state. They would not only do this in the name of itself. The Polks doubtless find little North Carolina, but we respectfully suggest that they will find more trouble in laying out our particular and peculiar
